Title The Famous Sensational Illusion, "Sawing a person in half", as explained in "Science and Invention".

Description:

Scene opens with living room suite. Platform and box in view. Magician enters and opens the box, attendants are standing behind the box. Summons young lady who is hyptonized.

Title After being hyptonized she is placed in the box.

Description:

The young lady is placed in the box with hands and head protruding through one end, and feet through the other end. The box is closed and hands, feet and head are then locked into position. A large saw is then used in sawing the box in two through the middle, after which the half boxes are separated making a space through which the magician walks. They are then pushed together again, head is turned to the audience and unlocked while the feet are also turned to the audience and unlocked. The lids are raised and subject still in an hyptonic state is lifted out of the box, placed on her feet and brought to life.

Title This illusion has baffled millions all over the world. It need not baffle you.

Title It is not our desire to show an expose' of the stage presentation of this illusion, but merely to show how such an effect can be produced.

Description:

Scene opens as young lady is placed in the box, head, hands and feet protrude as in previous scene, then the platform is turned so that the box is head on to the audience and lady is locked in position.

Title

While the head is being locked in position, this is what happens inside of box.

Description:

Young lady lying full length in box drawing her feet into position and another pair of feet coming up through the platform and going out through the foot holes of the box.

Description:

Continuation of locking head into position. Platform is then turned side to the audience, the box is sawed in two and the magician walks through as in previous scene, after which the box is pushed together again and platform is turned so that head is facing the audience when the magician unlocks the head.

Title

While the head is being unlocked, this is what takes place.

Description:

Young lady is doubled up in position, an additional pair of feet extend up through the platform and out through the holes in box. The feet are then withdrawn through the holes down through the platform at one side. The young lady straightens out and puts her feet through the holes.

Description:

Continue locking of head. Platform is turned side to the audience, feet are unlocked, box is opened, the young lady is removed, stood on her feet and brought to life from apparent hypnotic condition, whereupon the attendants remove the box, which is in two pieces, from the platform and also remove the top of the platform and assist the second young lady out of the platform presenting the entire company to the audience.

Title Birth of Flowers.
